Competition: Players take turns, in order, throwing three darts to try and score the target "hands" as shown on the table above. After throwing three darts, a score for that round MUST be placed in one of the available slots. If there is no available slot that matches the darts that were thrown, a zero must be scored in one of the open slots of the player's own choosing.

When both players have completed all the slots with scores and/or zeros, the total score is calculated and the player with the highest score wins.

Scoring is handled in a standard fashion, all the numbers count as themselves.
